3.8 Interview transcriptions

In the course of my research I have interviewed numerous musicians, artists, activists, creative industry workers, ranging from Glastonbury Festival organiser Michael Eavis to jazz historian and photographer Val Wilmer, singer/critic George Melly to artist/critic Jeff Nuttall to disabled musician David Rohoman. Where agreed I have made the transcriptions available online open access at <http://georgemckay.org/interviews>. Two sets of my music interviews are organised thematically:

'Jazz in Britain: interviews with modern and contemporary jazz musicians, composers and improvisers'. [Transcriptions from 2002 AHRB research project, 'Circular breathing'.]

'Trad jazz in 1950s Britain—protest, pleasure, politics—interviews with some of those involved'. [Transcriptions from 2001 AHRB research project, 'American pleasures, anti-American protest'.]

8. Impact and public engagement

8.1 Impact

My work was chosen as one of impact case studies for Salford's D36 (Communication, Cultural and Media Studies) return to REF2014, entitled 'Connecting creative communities, and social action: refiguring research processes'.

'... This case study focuses on community cultures and social movement activism, offering an understanding of participatory arts organisation and practice, and the history of radicalisation for new generations of activists, demonstrating the following impact:

- Understanding the changing nature of communities in their historical and cultural contexts and the role of communities in sustaining and enhancing our quality of life;
- Connecting communities with research, developing community-engaged research across a number of core themes, including:
 - Community creativity and participation;
 - Countercultures and protest groups;
 - Community environments, places and spaces such as festivals, and gardens;
 - Informing policy development in the areas of community participation and agency;
 - Informing social movement agendas and actions.'

My work on and with festivals is identified as one of the planned impact case studies for UEA's D36 return to REF2020.
